MORALIST. n. f. [moraliste, French.] One who teaches the duties of life.

The advice given by a great moralist to his friend was, that he should compose his passions; and let that be the work of reason, which would certainly be the work of time. Addison.

MORALITY. n. f. [moralité, Fr. from moral.]

1. The doctrine of the duties of life; ethics.
The system of moralité, to be gathered out of the writings of ancient sages, falls very short of that delivered in the gospel. Swift's Miscel.

A necessity of sinning is as impossible in moralité, as any the greatest difficulty can be in nature. Baker on Learning.
2. The form of an action which makes it the subject of reward, or punishment.

The moralité of an action is founded in the freedom of that principle, by virtue of which it is in the agent's power, having all things ready and requisite to the performance of an action, either to perform or not perform it. South's Sermons.
TO MORALIZE. v. a. [moraliser, French.]

1. To apply to moral purposes; to explain in a moral sense.
He 'as left me here behind to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

—I pray thee moralize them. Shak. Taming of the Shrew.
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
—O yes, into a thousand families. Shakespeare.

This fable is moralized in a common proverb. L'Estrange.
2. In Spenser it seems to mean, to furnish with manners or examples.

Fierce warres and faithful loves shall moralize my song. Fairy Queen, b. i.

3. In Prior, who imitates the foregoing line, it has a sense not easily discovered, if indeed it has any sense.

High as their trumpets tune his lyre he strung,
And with his prince's arms he moraliz'd his song. Prior.

TO MORALIZE. v. n. To speak or write on moral subjects.

MORALIZER. n. f. [from moralize.] He who moralizes.

MORALLY. adv. [from moral.]

1. In the ethical sense.
By good, good morally so called, bonum honestum, ought chiefly to be understood; and that the good of profit or pleasure, the bonum utile or jucundum, hardly come into any account here. South's Sermons.

Because this, of the two brothers killing each other, is an action morally unnatural; therefore, by way of preparation, the tragedy would have begun with heaven and earth in disorder, something physically unnatural. Rymer.

2. According to the rules of virtue.
To take away rewards and punishments, is only pleasing to a man who resolves not to live morally. Dryden.

3. Popularly; according to the common occurrences of life; according to the common judgment made of things.
It is morally impossible for an hypocrite to keep himself long upon his guard. L'Estrange.

The concurring accounts of many such witnesses render it morally, or, as we might speak, absolutely impossible that these things should be false. Atterbury's Sermons.

MORALS. n. f. [without a singular.] The practice of the duties of life; behaviour with respect to others.

Some, as corrupt in their morals as vice could make them, have yet been solicitous to have their children soberly, virtuously, and piously brought up. South's Sermons.

Learn then what morals critics ought to shew:
'Tis not enough wit, art, and learning join;
In all you speak, let truth and candor shine. Pope.

MORA'SS. n. f. [mayais, French.] Fen; bog; moor.
Landchapes point out the fairest and most fruitful spots, as well as the rocks, and wildernesses, and mora'sses of the country. Watts's Improvement of the Mind.

Nor the deep mora'ss
Refuse, but through the shaking wilderness
Pick your nice way. Thomson's Autumn, l. 480.

MORBI'D. n. f. [morbidus, Latin.] Diseased; in a state contrary to health.

Though every human constitution is morbid, yet are there diseases consistent with the common functions of life. Arbutnot.

MORBI'DNESS. n. f. [from morbid.] State of being diseased.

MORBI'FICAL. n. f. [morbus and facio, Lat. morbisque, Fr.]
MORBI'FICK. n. f. Causing diseases.

The air appearing so malicious in this morbisick conspiracy, exacts a more particular regard; wherefore initiate consumptives must change their air. Harvey on Consumptions.

This disease is cured by the critical resolution, concoction, and evacuation of the morbisick matter. Arbutnot.

MORO'SE. n. f. [morosus, Latin.] Proceeding from disease; not healthy.

Malphighi, under galls, comprehends all preternatural and morose tumours and excrescences of plants. Ray on Creation.

MORO'SITY. n. f. [from morosus, Lat.] Diseased state. A word not in use.

The inference is fair, from the organ to the action, that they have eyes, therefore some sight was designed, if we except the casual impediments or morosities in individuals. Brown.

MON

MORDA'CIOUS. adj. mordax, Latin.] Biting; apt to bite.

MORDA'CITY. n. f. [mordacitas, mordacitè, Fr. from mordax, Latin.] Biting quality.

It is to be inquired, whether there be any menstruum to dissolve any metal that is not fretting or corroding, and openeth the body by sympathy, and not by mordacity, or violent penetration. Bacon's Physical Remains.

MORDICANT. n. f. [mordeo, Lat. mordicant, Fr.] Biting; acrid.
He presumes, that the mordicant quality of bodies must proceed from a fiery ingredient; whereas the light and inflammable parts must be driven away by that time the fire has reduced the body to ashes. Boyle.

MORDICA'TION. n. f. [from mordicant.] The act of corroding or biting.

Another cause is mordication of the orifices, especially of the mesenteric veins; as any thing that is sharp and biting doth provoke the part to expel, and mustard provoketh inecizing. Bacon's Nat. Hist. No. 37.

MORE. adj. [mape, Saxon, the comparative of some or great.]

1. In greater number; in greater quantity; in greater degree.
Wrong not that wrong with more contempt. Shaksp.

Their riches were more than that they might dwell together. Gen. xxxvi. 7.
Let more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour. Exod. v. 9.

2. Greater. Now out of use.
The more part advised to depart. AAs xxvi. 12.

MORE. adv.

1. To a greater degree.
He loved Rachel more than Leah. Gen. xxix. 30.

The spirits of animate bodies are all, in some degree, more or less kindled. Bacon's Nat. Hist. No. 601.

Some were of opinion, that feeling more and more in himself the weight of time, he was not unwilling to bestow upon another some part of the pains.

The more the kindled combat rages higher,
The more with fury burns the blazing fire. Dryden's Ru.

As the blood passeth through narrower channels, the redness disappears more and more. Arbutnot on Aliments.

The more God has blessed any man with estate or quality, just so much less in proportion is the care he takes in the education of his children. Swift's Miscel.

2. The particle that forms the comparative degree.
I am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indispod and sickly fit
For the found man. Shakespeare's King Lear.

May you long live a happy instrument for your king and country: happy here, and more happy hereafter. Bacon.

The advantages of learning are more lasting than those of arms. Collier on Pride.

3. Again; a second time.
Little did I think I should ever have business of this kind on my hands more. Tatler, No. 83.

4. Longer; yet continuing; with the negative particle.
Cassius is no more! Oh, setting fun!
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set. Shakespeare.

MORE. n. f. [A kind of comparative from some or much.]

1. A greater quantity; a greater degree. Perhaps some of these examples which are adduced under the adverb, with the before more, should be placed here.

These kind of knaves in this plainness
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silky ducking observants. Shakespeare's Lear.

Were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
And my more having would be as a fauce
To make me hunger more. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

An heroic poem requires some great action of war; and as much or more of the active virtue than the suffering. Dryd.

The Lord do so, and much more, to Jonathan. 1 Sam.
From hence the greatest part of ill descend,
When lust of getting more will have no end. Dryden.

They that would have more and more can never have enough; no, not if a miracle should interpose to gratify their avarice. L'Estrange's Fables.

A mariner having let down a large portion of his sounding line, he reaches no bottom, whereby he knows the depth to be so many fathoms and more; but how much that more is, he hath no distinct notion. Lack.

2. Greater thing; other thing.
They, who so state a question, do no more but separate the parts of it one from another, and lay them to in their due order. Lack.

3. Second time; longer time.
4. It is doubtful whether the word, in some cases, be a noun or adverb.

The dove returned not again unto him any more. Gen. viii.
Pr'ythee be satisfy'd, he shall be aided,
Or I'll no more be king. Dryden's Cleopatra.

Delia, the queen of love, let all deplore!
Delia, the queen of beauty, is now no more. Watts.

MOR'E. n. f. [solanum, Latin.]

1. The morel is a plant, of which there are several species: one sort has a black fruit, the root of which is a foot long, waving, of a darkish white colour and stringy; its stalk, which is full of pith, rises to the height of a foot and an half, of a greenish cast and angular form, divided into several branches, with alternate leaves, oblong, pointed, undulated, of a darkish green and shining colour: the flowers proceed from the branches, a little below the leaves: they grow from five to about eight in a bunch, of an inch and an half: each flower is white, of a single leaf, cut in form of a basin, divided into five parts as far as the middle, being long, pointed, and arranged like a star: when the flower sheds there succeeds a spherical fruit, pretty hard, at first green like an olive, then black, full of a limpid juice and a great number of seeds. There is a sort of morel that has a red fruit; and likewise another that has a yellow fruit. Trevoux.

Spongy morels in strong ragoufts are found, Trevoux.
And in the soup the slimy snail is drown'd. Gay's Trivia.

2. A kind of cherry.
Morel is a black cherry, fit for the conservatory before it be thorough ripe, but it is bitter eaten raw. Mortimer.

MOR'ELAND. n. f. [moerlano, Saxon; more, a mountain, and land.] A mountainous or hilly country: a tract of Staffordshire is called the Morlands.

MORO'VER. n. f. [more and ever.] Beyond what has been mentioned; besides; likewise; also; over and above.

He did hold me dear
Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover. Shaksp.

Moreover by them is thy servant warned. Psal. xix. 11.
MOR'ELAY. n. f. A deadly weapon. Ains. Glaive and morie, French, and glay mior, Erse, a two-handed broadsword, which some centuries ago was the highlander's weapon.

MOR'GEROUS. adj. [morigerus, Lat.] Obedient; obsequious.

MOR'ION. n. f. [Fr.] A helmet; armour for the head; a calque. For all his majesty's ships a proportion of swords, targets, morions, and cuirass of proof should be allowed. Raleigh.

Pollif'd steel that call the view aside,

MOR'ISCO. n. f. [morisco, Spanish.] A dancer of the morris or moorish dance.

I have seen
Him caper upright like a wild morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts, as he his bells. Shak. Henry VI.

MOR'KIN. n. f. [Among hunters.] A wild beast, dead through sickness or mischance. Bailey.

MOR'LING. n. f. [mort, French.] Wool plucked from a MOR'LING. n. f. [in uopuac.] Bugbear; false terror.

MOR'NO. n. f. [mayne, Saxon.] The first part of the day; the morning. Morn is not used but by the poets.

The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat,
Awake the god of day. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleopatra.

Can you forget your golden beds,
Where you might sleep beyond the morn.
Friendship shall still thy evening feasts adorn,
And blooming peace shall ever bless thy morn. Prior.

MOR'NING. n. f. [morgen, Teutonic; but our morning seems rather to come from morn.] The first part of the day, from the first appearance of light to the end of the first fourth part of the sun's daily course.

One master Brook hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

By the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me. Shaksp. Richard III.

As morning roses newly wash'd with dew. Shaksp.
Your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away. Hol. vi. 5.

Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning light. 1 Sam. xiv. 36.

Morning by morning shall it pass over. 1 Ja. xxviii. 19.
What shall become of us before night, who are weary so early in the morning? Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

The morning is the proper part of the day for study. Dryd.
The twining jessamine and blushing rose,
With lavish grace their morning scents disclose. Prior.

All the night they stem the liquid way,
And end their voyage with the morning ray. Pope's Odyssey.

MOR'NING-GOWN. n. f. A loose gown worn before one is formally dressed.
Seeing a great many in rich morning-gowns, he was amazed to find that persons of quality were up so early. Addison.

MORNING-STAR. n. f. The planet Venus when she shines in the morning.

MOR

Bright as doth the morning-star appear
Out of the East, with flaming locks bedight,
To tell the dawning day is drawing near. Fairy Qu.

MORO'SE. adj. [morosus, Latin.] Sour of temper; peevish; fullen.

Without these precautions, the man degenerates into a cynick, the woman into a coquette; the man grows fullen and morese, the woman impertinent. Addison's Spectator.

Some have deserved censure for a morese and affected taciturnity, and others have made speeches, though they had nothing to say. Watts's Improvement of the Mind.

MORO'SELY. adv. [from morese.] Sourly; peevishly.
Too many are as *morese*ly positive in their age, as they were childishly so in their youth. Gov. of the Tongue.

MORO'SENESS. n. f. [from morese.] Sourness; peevishness.
Learn good humour, never to oppose without just reason; abate some degrees of pride and *morese*ness. Watt.

MORO'SITY. n. f. [morositas, Lat. from morese.] Moroseness; peevishness.

Why then be sad,
But entertain no morosity, brothers, other
Than a joint burthen laid upon us. Shakespeare.

Some morosities
We must expect, since jealousy belongs
To age, of scorn, and tender sense of wrongs. Denham.

The pride of this man, and the popularity of that; the levity of one, and the morosity of another. Clarendon.

MORRIS. n. f. [that is moorish or morisco-dance.]

MORRIS-DANCE. n. f. [that is moorish or morisco-dance.] 1. A dance in which bells are gingled, or staves or swords clashed, which was learned by the Moors, and was probably a kind of Pyrrhick or military dance.

The queen stood in some doubt of a Spanish invasion, though it proved but a morris-dance upon our waves. Wotton.
One in his catalogue of a feigned library, sets down this title of a book, The morris-dance of heretics. Bacon.

The founts and seas, with all their finny drove,
Now to the moon in wavering morrice move. Milton.

I took delight in pieces that shewed a country village, morrice-dancing, and peasants together by the ears. Peachment.

Four reapers danced a morrice to oaten pipes. Speator.

2. Nine mens MORRIS. A kind of play with nine holes in the ground.

The folds stand empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrain flock;
The nine mens morris is filled up with mud. Shakespeare.

MORRIS-DANCER. n. f. [morris and dance.] One who dances a la morisco, the moorish dance.

There went about the country a set of morrice-dancers, composed of ten men, who danced a maid marian and a tabor and pipe. Temple.

MORPHEW. n. f. [morphae, French; morphae, low Latin; morpha, Italian.] A scurf on the face.

MOR'KROW. n. f. [morgen, Saxon; morgen, Dutch. The original meaning of morrow seems to have been morning, which being often referred to on the preceding day, was understood in time to signify the whole day next following.]

1. The day after the present day.
I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word;
To have 't with saying, good morrow. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

Thou
Canst pluck night from me, but not lend a morrow. Shak.

The Lord did that thing on the morrau. Exod. ix. 6.
Peace, good reader, do not weep,
Peace, the lovers are asleep;
They, sweet turtles, folded lie,
In the last knot that love could tie;
Let them sleep, let them sleep on,
Till this stormy night be gone,
And the eternal morrau dawn,
Then the curtains will be drawn,
And they waken with the light,
Whose day shall never sleep in night. Craheaw.

Beyond the Indies does this morrau lie. Cowley.

2. To MOR'KROW. [This is an idiom of the same kind, supposing morrau to mean originally morning: as, to night; to day.] On the day after this current day.

To morrau comes; 'tis noon; 'tis night;
This day like all the former flies;
Yet on he runs to seek delight
To morrau, till to night he dies. Prior.

3. To MOR'KROW is sometimes, I think improperly, used as a noun.
We by to morrau draw out all our store,
Till the exhausted well can yield no more.
To morrau is the time when all is to be rectified. Speator.

MORSE. n. f. A sea-horse.

That which is commonly called a sea-horse is properly called a marje, and makes not out that shape. Brown.

It seems to have been a tusk of the marje or waltron, called by some the sea-horse. Woodward on Fossils.
